SYNOPSIS

Hansel and Gretel (no, not the ones from the fairy tale) get a dog from their grandfather. Herman is not like other dogs and he is quite difficult to control. But the twins love him anyway.

Shortly after, there is commotion in the small residential area where they live. Some scoundrel have dug up all Mrs Brown's flowers up and have eaten Bricklayer Brian's rabbits. All neighbours are sure that Herman is the culprit, but the twins immediately set out to find the real rabbit killer. They have to prove that Herman is innocent.

But then Hans starts to have doubts. Is the dog really as innocent as they think?
